Will NATO bases be deployed in Finland?

The Finnish Minister of Defense, Antti Häkkänen, has decided to approve the deployment of NATO military bases on the country's territory.

Will a new defense agreement paves a way for US military gear in Finland?

(YouTube/U.S. State Department) U.S. forces are gaining access to 15 military sites in Finland, where a new defense agreement reached this week also paves the way for the positioning of American military gear in the country. Secretary of State Antony Blinken said Monday that the deal will enhance the Pentagon's ability to carry out missions there.

Where are the NATO forward land forces based in Finland?

As deployment locations, Rovaniemi and Sodankylä provide challenging yet excellent conditions for troop training, not only in northern Finland but also across a wider area," Defense Minister Häkkänen said. The NATO Forward Land Forces bases will be part of the Alliance's collective defense tasks during peacetime.

Is the Finnish Army Command located in Mikkeli?

Finnish Defence Minister Antti Häkkänen (NCP) said earlier this week that the decision has not been confirmed as yet but will be announced soon. The Army Command (ARCOM) of the Finnish Defence Forces is already located in Mikkeli, which Yle understands was a decisive factor in the decision.

Will US troops be able to travel to Finland?

Among the sites U.S. forces will be granted access to is a border guard base in Ivalo, a northern area near Russia's fortified Kola Peninsula. In line with other U.S. agreements, NATO treaty rules that exempt military pay from local taxation also apply for troops on missions in Finland.

Where will the FLF be stationed?

The FLF command component will be permanently stationed in Finland, while the units themselves will be present there as part of exercises. The FLF forces will be closely integrated into NATO's operational planning, and if the security situation changes, their numbers can always be increased to brigade level.
